Colored Dots

A large crowd attended the funeral services of the late Mrs. Hattie Mitchell at the Morning Star Baptist Church last Tuesday evening at 3:30. The deceased died at her home in Evergreen early Saturday morning, after an illness of several weeks. She was a faithful member of the Morning Star Baptist Church. She served as Sunday School teacher for a number of years. She also was a member of the Grand United Order of Moses.

Rev. S. E. Singleton, pastor of the deceased, delivered the eulogy. He was assisted in the service by the Rev. R. Q. Lawing, who acknowledged the telegram and resolution. The church choir under the direction of Mrs. Singleton rendered music. The floral contributions were in large numbers. The following survive: one son, Marshall Mitchell, Washington, D. C.; two daughters, Mrs. Elenora Webb, Evergreen and Miss Viola Mitchell Caroline County, Virginia; one sister, 13 grandchildren and 3 great grandchildren, and a host of relatives and friends. Burial was in the church cemetery.

Impressive services were held at the Promise Land Baptist Church last Sunday morning. The Reverend James Franklin, Jr., was the guest minister. The church choir, under the direction of Miss Sergon, rendered special music. The offering was very good.

When we take note of some of the past achievements we heartily agree. Did you know that the NOS. bought 1,000 acres of land for Piedmont Sanitorium and helped to erect the first building at Burkeville, Or, that the NOS. recently bought Camp India Hamilton, located on the York River in Gloucester County, valued at $37,000? Or, that the NOS. gives at least fifteen College Scholarships to boys and girls each year? Don't forget the date of meeting.

FALL CLEAN-UP IN GARDEN AIDS CONTROL OF DISEASE

A clean-up of old plant refuse, diseased leaves of vegetables, etc., in the garden in the fall will help keep down disease next year, says S. B. Fenne, plant pathologist at VPI.

Fenne says the clean-up is especially important with home gardeners and truck farmers where vegetables are grown intensively, and in fields where rotations are not used. The most effective way to dispose of the material is to burn it.

Where enough land is available to practice a three-year or a four-year rotation, turning under the old material by fall plowing is generally effective. Many growers make the mistake of composting their vegetable trimmings or field refuse and applying the manure from this compost heap back to the fields. The disease organisms often live over the winter in the compost pile, and applying the material to fields which are to be planted to the same crops next season creates disease-favoring conditions.

Destroying weeds also is important, as many of them harbor plant disease organisms. All perennial weeds along the margins of a garden or truck field should be destroyed.

Some common diseases carried over in plant refuse are anthracnose, bacterial blight, halo blight, rootknot and root rot of beans, leaf spot and rootknot of beets, soft rot, ordinary blight, black - leg, rootknot of cabbage, and various diseases of cucumbers and cantaloupes.

Appomattox is a growing town.

Boston, Mass.- Charles W. Thiery, who celebrated his 106th birthday on October 26th, credits his good health to his lack of interest in women. Admitting that women today are just as beautiful as they were in the last century, Thiery added: "I never paid much attention to them. Marriage is not for me."

The Toledo Blade announced its endorsement of Mr. Stevenson, the first time in its 121-year history that it has suported a Democrat.
